History:

Pilot Grove - Mt Vernon Cemetery Association From "Pilot Grove Centennial 1873 - 1973"

The Pilot Grove - Mt. Vernon Cemetery Association Inc., of Pilot Grove has two cemeteries under its charge The Pilot Grove Cemetery located on the western edge of the city limits and the Mt. Vernon Cemetery located about one mile south of the city.

The Mt. Vernon Church Cemetery had its beginning as a church affiliated burial grounds; it adjoined the church grounds. Mt. Vernon was first a camp-grounds, where people came together from far and wide to camp out and hold religious services in the era of early settlement. In 1833, Mr. John McCutcheon gave between three and five acres of land for a Cumberland Presbyterian Church and Cemetery site.

The church building has since been torn down and the membership transferred into Pilot Grove, Missouri, but many old markers of another era remain. The marble stones in the cemetery contain much historical data and are fine examples of the carved art of that past time. Some of the earliest burials were in the early 1840's; the first burial, based on data taken from a stone, records that Mrs. Harriet L. McCutcheon, a charter member of the church. The Methodists of the community, who were friends and neighbors of the members, not having a burial ground at that time, were granted permission to bury their dead here, also, as well as slaves of some of the families.

The first board of directors of the organization were: W. E. Roberts, J. W. McCutcheon, R. K. Roe, J. J. Maddex, A. C. Harriman, M. J. Goode, E. H. Harris, Jr. The present board of directors are W. R. Mitzel, pres.; R. L. Painter, vice-pres. and treas.; William Mullett; Carl Haynie; Glen Schlotzhauer; and Mrs. Joe Ryback, sec.

"The Mt. Vernon Cemetery is a part of the Pilot Grove - Mt. Vernon Cemetery Association, organized in 1913. It is a beautiful spot and is well cared for. There have been burials here in recent years - the latest in 1981." - From an article in the Pilot Grove Weekly Record in 1932:

Established by the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. These names are all recorded and in files in the court house. Latter additions in red are from the Cooper County Record of Deaths. Even later additions, including information from obituaries is given in blue.
